anant_national_university Textiles got a new lease of life in a workshop conducted by UK-based textile artist Tanvi Kant (@tanvikant) at Anant National University today.

Students, faculty members and staff, got hands-on experience in making textile jewellery from unused clothes through wrapping, coiling, knotting and stitching. Besides, the AnantU community also got the opportunity to hear about her projects, exhibitions and things that influenced her to pursue the path of sustainability in fashion.

Anant National University, India's first DesignX University, offers country's first Sustainable Fashion and Textile Design programme. Visit our bio to know more about this major and several others specialisations that we offer at AnantU.
