About Event:

The Student Startup and Innovation Sensitization program for the Humanities department witnessed unprecedented unity, as students from English, Gujarati, Sanskrit, Political Science, Psychology, Economics, Law, History, and Sociology departments came together and get motivated by Prof. Sunil Chaki. Prof. Sunil Chaki inspired the diverse group, emphasizing the power of interdisciplinary collaboration and creative problem-solving. Students presented unique solutions addressing social, cultural, and economic challenges. With renewed enthusiasm, participants pledged to harness their humanities expertise to drive social impact. The program fostered a culture of innovation, encouraging 144 students to register for SSIP 2.0's incubation programs, paving the way for human-centered startups.

Outcome of Event:

Key takeaways included enhanced awareness of innovation and entrepreneurship among humanities students, increased collaboration across departments, and development of innovative solutions addressing social and cultural challenges.
