Expert: Mr. Minesh Prajapati - Head, Incubation, IAR University

Brief biography of the expert:

Mr. Minesh Prajapati is the Head of Incubation at IAR University, where he leads the institution's efforts to nurture student entrepreneurs and build a robust startup ecosystem on campus. With vast experience in the startup and innovation domain, he has closely worked with early-stage founders, guiding them through ideation, validation, and early execution of their business ideas. In his role, he has been instrumental in mentoring numerous student startups under the university's incubation cell, helping them access funding, mentorship, and structured support through schemes such as SSIP. His practical, hands-on approach to entrepreneurship makes him a sought-after speaker for sessions aimed at introducing students to the fundamentals of building a startup.

Objective of the Event:

The session on "Lean Startup and MVP" was conducted as part of the New Student Induction Program to introduce first-year UG students to the foundational concepts of entrepreneurship and startups at the very outset of their academic journey. The session aimed to:

- Familiarize new students with basic startup terminology and the entrepreneurial mindset.
- Introduce the Lean Startup methodology as a practical framework for building businesses under uncertainty.
- Explain the concept of a Minimum Viable Product (MVP) and its role in validating ideas quickly and cost-effectively.
- Create awareness about the Student Startup and Innovation Policy (SSIP) and the support available to students through IAR University's incubation cell.
- Encourage students to view innovation and entrepreneurship as a viable career pathway alongside academics.

Brief Overview of the Session:

The session began with a warm welcome to the newly inducted first-year UG students, setting the context of why entrepreneurship and innovation are integral to the vision of IAR University - "Innovation, Incubation, Impact." Mr. Minesh Prajapati opened with an overview of essential startup terminology, including terms such as ideation, prototype, pivot, validation, scalability, and product-market fit, helping students build a shared vocabulary before diving into deeper concepts.

He then introduced the Lean Startup methodology, explaining how it enables entrepreneurs to build and test business ideas through a continuous cycle of Build - Measure - Learn, rather than committing significant time and resources to a fully developed product upfront. He emphasized how this approach reduces risk, saves resources, and helps founders make informed, data-driven decisions rather than relying on assumptions.

A significant part of the session was dedicated to the concept of a Minimum Viable Product (MVP) - the simplest version of a product that allows a team to collect the maximum validated learning about customers with the least effort. Mr. Prajapati explained the difference between an MVP and a finished product, illustrated with relatable, real-world examples of well-known startups that began with a basic MVP before scaling into full-fledged products. He walked students through the key steps of building an MVP: identifying the core problem, defining the target user, stripping the idea down to its most essential feature, testing it with real users, and iterating based on feedback.

The session also touched upon common pitfalls first-time founders face, such as over-engineering the product before validating demand, ignoring user feedback, and scaling prematurely. Mr. Prajapati connected these lessons to the support ecosystem available at IAR University, briefing students about SSIP (Student Startup and Innovation Policy) and how the university's incubation cell can help them convert ideas into validated MVPs through mentorship, funding facilitation, and access to resources.

The session concluded with an interactive Q&A round where students enthusiastically asked questions about idea validation, forming founding teams, and how to approach the incubation cell with their own startup concepts.

Outcome of the Event:

The session successfully introduced over 500 first-year UG students to the core principles of the Lean Startup methodology and the concept of MVP right at the start of their academic journey. Students gained clarity on how to approach a business idea methodically - starting small, validating assumptions, and iterating based on real user feedback - rather than jumping straight to a finished product. The session also created strong awareness about SSIP and the role of the incubation cell at IAR University, encouraging students to explore entrepreneurship as a parallel track to their academic pursuits and to approach the incubation team with their own ideas.

Audience/Participants Feedback:

Participants, being first-year students newly inducted into the university, found the session highly engaging and easy to relate to, given the use of simple language and real-world examples. Many students appreciated the clarity provided on the difference between an idea and a validated MVP, and expressed enthusiasm about approaching the incubation cell to explore their own startup ideas. Several students also noted that the session helped demystify entrepreneurship as a concept, making it feel accessible and achievable rather than an intimidating, distant goal.

Report for Media:

The Institution's Innovation Council (IIC), IAR University, successfully conducted a session on "Lean Startup and MVP" as part of the New Student Induction Program, held on 14th July 2026.

Key highlights:

- 500+ first-year UG students inducted into the world of startups and innovation
- Session by Mr. Minesh Prajapati, Head - Incubation, IAR University
- Deep dive into Lean Startup methodology - Build, Measure, Learn
- Concept of Minimum Viable Product (MVP) explained with real-world examples
- Awareness created on SSIP and IAR University's incubation support ecosystem

A strong start for our new students to think like innovators and problem-solvers from Day One!
